

Into the Unknown

This week, for me, truly marks the beginning of my ISM journey. Before this everything we have been doing has been to build up our professionalism but now we are tasked with beginning our research. I want to utilize this week's Annotated Bibliography Assignment to help me gauge what specific niche I am interested in so I can focus my future research while also starting to look for mentors. I am sure that I want to do something in the field of Computer Science. Still, even within this sector, there could be many paths I could take like virtual reality, artificial intelligence, or even cryptocurrency. Even then these categories are still far too broad and I hope to find an interesting niche for me to conduct my research. In other news, earlier this week we had to give our introductory speeches to our peers. For my speech, I wanted to focus on my goals for the future because I believe that one of the best ways to learn about someone is by learning about their end goals. For my speech, I discussed my dream of becoming an entrepreneur and my hopes to make a big impact in the world through this path. It was amazing to hear everyone else's speech and I believe I learned a lot about what type of person they are. Going into next week I would like to dive deeper into my research and begin looking for a mentor in my field by asking for interviews!
